Cathy Fields - Thinking Out Loud

Third Thursday, April 17th from five to nine

I first came to know Cathy Fields' work when I put together a show called "Whimsy". Cathy entered a piece called "An Unlikely Parade". I loved it and the more of her art I saw, the more it was obvious that a big part of her work is the thought behind it. There are some of her favorite themes in this show. These paintings are all about nature and environments; in the past, present, and a wildly imagined future, and the inhabitants of these places - mammalian and otherwise. Come have a look at this collection of visually luscious paintings. They are not only great fun to look at, they give a glimpse into the mind of a truly independent thinker.
